Introduction

The records of the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company (DCDC) were first received from the Company in 1996. Subsequent accessions have led to a current span date range of 1964 to 2002. The records are divided into ten record series contained in 102 manuscript boxes spanning approximately 48.25 linear feet. Record series include:

- Series I: Board of Trustees Records
- Series II: Administrative Records
- Series III: Personnel Records
- Series IV: Financial Records
 - Subseries IVA: Audits and Tax Filings
 - Subseries IVB: Grants, Sponsorships, and General Fund Raising
 - Subseries IVC: General Budget Information
- Series V: Programs
- Series VI: Performances
- Series VII: Publicity
- Series VIII: Photographs, Videos, and Other Media
- Series IX: Newsletters and Dance Magazines
- Series X: Music Scores, Memorabilia and Other Material

There are no restrictions on access to the records. All personal information has been removed from the records and returned to the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company.

History

In 1949, Josephine Schwarz, founder of The Dayton Ballet, established classes at the Linden Community Center in response to a need for dance education among Dayton's urban youth. Jeraldyn Blunden, a native Daytonian, was named to serve as the director of the community center dance school in 1960. Through years of training and community performances, a small group of exceptionally talented dancers emerged with the discipline and commitment needed to create a professional dance company. In 1968, Jeraldyn Blunden founded the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company.

Under Blunden's artistic direction, Dayton Contemporary Dance Company became a significant force in American modern dance. Having studied professionally with modern dance experts, such as Martha Graham, Jose Limon and James Truitte, and having performed with Dayton Theatre Dance Company (now The Dayton Ballet), Karumu Dancers (Cleveland, OH), Antioch Summer Theatre and the Connecticut Dance Theatre Workshop, Jeraldyn Blunden played an integral role in the dance field, contributing to the development and performance of contemporary dance on a regional, national and international scale. Her artistic vision and knowledge of dance served the dance world primarily through the mission and achievements of the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company.

As a modern dance company rooted in the African American experience, DCDC's mission is to deliver contemporary dance of the highest quality to the broadest possible audience. DCDC reaches the audience with local performances, through national and international touring, and through the company's education programs in the Miami Valley. Throughout its history, the company has continually worked to build its collection of dances by the most significant modern dance creators and holds the largest collection in the world of classic works by African American choreographers. Highlights of DCDC's history include:

- The first African American dance company to gain membership as a Performing Company in the Northeast Regional Ballet Association. (1973)
- One of four dance companies selected to take part in the American Dance Festival program, "Black Traditions in American Modern Dance." (1987)
- Jeraldyn Blunden honored with "Genius" award from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. (1994)
- One of six American companies (and the only one not based in New York) chosen to participate in the Biennial de la Danse in Lyon, France. (1994)
- One of only nine organizations (and only Dance Company) selected to participate in the Ford Foundation's Working Capital Fund. The Working Capital Fund for Minority Cultural Institutions is a capacity-building initiative targeted to mid-sized, culturally specific arts organizations that have reached a critical juncture in their institutional development. (1996)
- Sheri "Sparkle" Williams, principal dancer with DCDC, recipient of New York Dance and Performance "Bessie" Award. (1997)
- Jeraldyn Blunden (posthumous) recipient of Dance Magazine Award and Dance/USA Honors 2000 Award.

- Chosen by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts to participate in its “Capacity Building Program for Culturally Specific Arts Organizations.” (2002)
- Launched 27-city national tour of The Flight Project. (2003-2004)

Funding support for the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company is derived from a variety of sources, including individual membership contributions, local corporate support to partially underwrite series performances, local, state, and federal tax-supported grants, private donations and ArtsDayton, a united arts fund agency. A 23-member volunteer board of directors serves DCDC in an advisory capacity and is comprised of local business and community leaders.

Scope and Content Note

The Dayton Contemporary Dance Company records document the administrative, financial and performances of an important modern dance company. Researchers will note under the Financial records series, the constant struggle for funding represented in hundreds of grant applications, financial statements, and even letters to dance studio landlords. Where the collection shines is in the occasional illuminating glimpses of the dancing life represented in fragments of diaries and dancer notebooks. DCDC contractual rules with dancers have been very strict, as might be expected given the Company's very high standards, and these reveal the tough commitment needed to perform as a DCDC dancer. Highlights of the collection include correspondence with dance choreographers especially Ulysses Dove.

The records of DCDC are divided into 10 series. Series I comprises records of the DCDC Board of Trustees including minutes from 1977 on, and records of individual board committees. These records are arranged chronologically.

Series II consists of Administrative Records. The first part of the series contains basic business records including the Constitution, Articles of Incorporation, Code of Regulations, By-Laws, lease agreements, contracts with private agencies, and similar information essential to the operation of the company. The second half of the series includes general subject files arranged alphabetically. Overall, much of the information in this series is routine but the files do contain occasional records of interest to historians.

Series III consists of Personnel Records. Information of a sensitive nature (such as Social Security Numbers, etc.) have been removed from these records and returned to DCDC. However, care should still be taken in the use of this material to prevent the unauthorized disclosure of private personal information. Also included in this series are general dancer contracts, records of searches, and more useful information such as position descriptions, personnel policies, union correspondence and contracts, and the Employee Handbook. Contracts with dancers and choreographers are also included but random files may contain interesting correspondence. The series is arranged by subject and then alphabetically.

Series IV contains the Financial Records of the company. This series is divided into three subseries. The first subseries, Subseries IVA, contains audit reports, tax returns, and general tax information for DCDC from 1980 through 2000. Subseries IVB, Grants, Sponsorships, and General Fund Raising, documents the efforts of the company to obtain funding from a number of local, state, and national sources. Of particular note are the efforts to obtain funds during the severe fiscal crises the company experienced in the mid 1980's and again in the early 1990's. In both cases, special committees were formed, largely by board members to raise money to keep the company going. Also reflected in the financial records is the gradual diminishment of federal urban assistance grants for which DCDC was eligible. The last subseries, Subseries IVC, General Budget Information, contains general budget reports and similar information from 1983 through 2000.

Series V contains the performance programs of the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company. The programs included in this series span the period 1968 through 1998. Also included in this series are the programs on non-DCDC dance and ballet companies. The series is arranged chronologically.

Series VI contains Performance files, the largest of all the series. Spanning the period 1977 through 1998, this series documents the hundreds of performance by the company including local, national and international performances. The records include travel information for company members and often, the original contract related to a performance. DCDC performances tend to be of three types, simple “lecture-demonstrations” (mini-concerts) often presented at schools and colleges, full length concerts presented throughout the United States and overseas, and the regular season performances in Dayton. Performance files are arranged chronologically. Included in this series after the performance files is information regarding the performances of the “Muse Machine,” general performance-related correspondence, general performance information, and production schedules

Series VII, Publicity, includes a chronological record of DCDC playbills and publicity materials including press releases, public service announcements, press reviews, and news and magazine articles about DCDC.

Series VIII, Photographs, Videos, and Other Media, contains some very expressive photographs of the dancers in action. Many have been identified by company founder, Jeraldne Blunden, who was working on this during the last year of her life. Photographs range in dates from the 1970’s to the late 1990’s. There is a good collection of still photos freezing dance moments and identified with dancer names, venues and the names of dances being performed. This series also includes four reel-to-reel video recordings of dances performed in the late 1970’s.

Series IX, Newsletters and Dance Magazines, contains local and national newsletters and magazines concerning dance. Many of the magazines contain articles on the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company.

The last series, Series X, contains a variety of items including music scores and sheet music for some of the dances performed by the company. Also included are Youngstown, Pittsburgh, and Dayton proclamations honoring the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company. Finally, for researchers interested in individual notes, the series contains notes made about dances by Kevin Ward, Melissa Swartz, and Staci Schockley.
