Historical Note:

Formed in 1936, the Inland Children's Chorus was a unique blend of American industry, youth, and the performing arts. The Inland Manufacturing Division of the General Motors Corporation sponsored the Chorus in an effort to contribute to the cultural life of the community and provide 8-16 year old children of employees "A musical education and training which they otherwise might not be able to obtain." The Chorus was open to children of Inland employees. Richard Westbrook was the founding director of the Chorus. He directed the Chorus until his death in 1955, at which point Joseph Geiger became director until the dissolution of the Chorus in 1970.

During its 34 year tenure, the Chorus gained national acclaim through concerts and television and radio appearances. They often performed with the Dayton Philharmonic and for audiences at the Dayton Art Institute (many of the programs from these concerts can be found in the collection). The boys performed in Eaton suits and the girls wore Alice Blue gowns. The Chorus quickly drew acclaim for its concerts, national radio broadcasts, and television performances. Milton J. Cross, known as "the voice of the Metropolitan Opera," called the Chorus "one of the most unique and inspiring programs of its kind in the country." Inland brought in Raymond Sovey, a two-time Tony Award nominee and Broadway theatrical designer, to stage the concerts. The children were rewarded for their part with annual Christmas gifts, some of which are included in the collection, and special picnic outings in the summer. The Chorus was disbanded in 1970 and the Inland Division was later sold to Delphi Automotive Systems.

In 2009, 39 years after the Chorus ended, Gerald Alred, a former Chorus member, organized a lunch with other former members, who exchanged memories and materials they had kept from their years in the Chorus. He then developed a website, inlandchorus.com, in an effort to preserve the Chorus' unique history and provide a forum for former members to share their memories. Materials from former members are sent to Gerald Alred, who digitizes and describes them on the website. Seeking a permanent home for the original materials, Gerald Alred contacted Special Collections & Archives at Wright State University to create the archival collection in 2010. Each year since, Gerald Alred has organized a luncheon in the Dayton, Ohio area for former members of the Chorus and their families. The first luncheon was in 2010. The luncheon is a time to socialize, share memories, and bring in additional material for this collection.

Scope and Content

The Inland Children's Chorus Collection provides insight into the performing arts in Dayton, Ohio during the mid-20th century, and the formative impact that the experience of performing in the Chorus had on the children's lives over time. The collection is unique in that it was amassed from members over 40 years after the Chorus was dissolved. The materials they kept as children were later donated as adults to form this collection. Materials were donated by former members spanning the Chorus' 34 year history. The collection also offers insight into industry and social life. Inland Children's Chorus was financed by Inland Manufacturing Company, and also had strong ties with the Dayton Philharmonic Orchestra and the Dayton Art Institute. The collection is arranged into six series:

Series I, Articles, contains highlights on the Chorus which appeared in the Inlander, GM Folks, and the Dayton Daily News. Also included is the January 1973 Inland 50th Anniversary Publication. Articles that are mounted for display and presentation are housed in box 2 to accommodate the larger size. Please note that newspaper reviews of concerts are located with the corresponding concert program in Series III.

Series II, Music, includes 78 rpm and 33 1/3 rpm records of the Chorus in concert and in studio settings. Of note are two record albums of the Linden Center Children's Chorus from circa 1947. The Linden Center Chorus was also sponsored by Inland Manufacturing, but at the time, specifically open to African American children. In 1995, former Chorus member Matt Phelan, created an audio cassette tape of the Chorus' 1940 concert music and distributed it to former members. Similarly, in 2010, 2012, and 2014 former Chorus member Gerald Alred, created CDs of the Chorus' music to distribute. These digital files are all available through the E-Archives, however, please note that Gerald Alred and Audio Engineer Bill Howe worked together to upgrade and convert hundreds of record donations to high quality digital WAV files, which are available on the on the Inland Children's Chorus website at <http://inlandchorus.com/music.php> and in the E-Archives ms432_e0017.

Series III, Programs, is arranged chronologically, and includes programs from all decades that the Chorus performed. Some of the programs are autographed by chorus members, and in some instances tickets are included with the program. Newspaper reviews for a particular concert are located after the concert program. Of note is a presentation board displaying the very first concert program in 1936 and the Chorus' last concert program in 1970.

Series IV, Photographs, is arranged chronologically. It contains publicity photographs and concert photographs of the Chorus spanning 1936-1970. Also included are photographs from the annual luncheon starting in 2010. Of note is a collection of clippings and professional photographs from a 1944 Dayton Journal-Herald feature on the Inland Children's Chorus. Also of note are autographed photographs of Richard Westbrook and Hugh Ross from 1953, and a blue framed photograph of the Chorus from the St. Nicolas performance in 1953 (which hung in the Loretto rehearsal room for years).

Series V, Mementos and Memories, houses Christmas gifts given to the Chorus members, including a bracelet, hair ribbon, piece of fabric from the Alice Blue Gowns, and sterling silver gold belt buckle inscribed "Inland Chorus '52", among others. Tickets and schedules from the Le Sourdsville Lake outings for the children, certificates of achievement, and graduate silhouettes, an original transcript of the WLW radio broadcast on Christmas Eve 1940, and an original St. Nicolas Cantata and score, are among the memories represented. Of note are letters sent at critical points in the Chorus' history: after the death of Director Richard Westbrook in 1955, and when the Chorus was dissolved in 1970.

Series VI, InlandChorus.com Website and Audio Files, includes a full off-line version of the inlandchorus.com website, complete with video and audio files. Also included are .WAV files of all the music from the records in Series II. The contents of the series is located in the E-Archives.
