Scope and Contents

The collection consists of a Pilot Log Book documenting John J. Hamilton's flights from December 1931 to September 1932. The log records the type of aircraft flown, the license and engine type of each plane, as well as the duration, start point, and destination of the flight. Notes about the flights also appear, including whether he flew "dual" (for training) or solo. It also notes his license test on August 19, 1932. Additionally, there is a news clipping announcing that Hamilton received his private pilot's license.
